17 quotes from Francis Picabia: 'Our heads are round so our thoughts can change direction.', 'The devil follows me day and night because he is afraid to be alone.', and 'Dada is like your hopes: nothing like your paradise: nothing like your idols: nothing like your heroes: nothing like your artists: nothing like your religions:.

17 Nov 2016 . Make way for Francis Picabia, one of the grandest, most mordant exemplars of early modernism, and perhaps the least familiar. The Museum of Modern Art — having for decades drummed the artistic feats of Picasso, Matisse, Mondrian and Duchamp into cultural consciousness — has finally rolled out the.

Drawings, for many artists, are visualized thought. Due to the immediacy of its expression, drawing has traditionally been defined as the most direct medium in the visual arts. The spontaneity of a drawing keeps it closer to the ideas that inspired it. It is not, therefore, surprising that Francis Picabia, obsessed with speed,.

Francis Picabia was born François Marie Martinez Picabia on or about January 22, 1879, in Paris, of a Spanish father and a French mother. He was enrolled at the Ecole des Arts Décoratifs in Paris from 1895 to 1897 and later studied with Fernand Cormon, Ferdinand Humbert, and Albert Charles Wallet. He began to paint.

In 1922, Francis Picabia moved away from Dadaist proposals to present his new works at Barcelona's Dalmau gallery. This was a series of very stripped-down pieces that show an innovative plastic concept based on geometry and developed from the circle. In the historical Dalmau exhibition, alongside works with roots in.
